The BNP, its former leaders and present leader, Nick Griffin, have promoted anti-semitism and Holocaust denial or revisionism in the past. In 1996, writing in his own publication, The Rune, Griffin stated that:

"I am well aware that orthodox opinion is that six million Jews were gassed and cremated or turned into soup and lampshades. I have reached the conclusion that the 'extermination' tale is a mixture of Allied wartime propaganda, extremely profitable lie, and latter witch-hysteria."

The following year, during a Cook Report documentary he stated: "There is no doubt that hundreds, probably thousands of Jews were shot to death in Eastern Europe, because they were rightly or wrongly seen as communists or potential partisan supporters. That was awful. But this nonsense about gas chambers is exposed as a total lie."

The 2002 Channel 4 documentary Young, Nazi and Proud featured hidden-camera footage of the then BNP youth leader Mark Collett stating his admiration for Adolf Hitler, and stating

"I'd never say this on camera, the Jews have been thrown out of every country including England. It's not just persecution. There's no smoke without fire."

It also featured footage of visitors to the party's annual 'Red White and Blue' festival, some of whom wore the legend "88" (code for HH, "Heil Hitler").

Collett resigned from the party after the documentary's filming, but rejoined shortly afterwards, with Nick Griffin's approval,

The leader of the Young BNP Mark Collett is one such charmless nerk.

He's gone on record to say that "Hitler will live on forever and maybe I will too", "Honestly now, would you prefer your kid growing up in Oldham and Burnley or 1930s Germany? It would be better for your child to grow up there" and "When people say that I am evil, yeah I am.

But it all depends. I'm either the sweetest angel or the most evil being you've ever encountered. It just depends which side you push me. Never kill people. Push them to the point of despair where they do it themselves because that's when you've really won."

Why is the Holocaust such a big deal? Why are the Jews so special? What about the Slavs and Romanis? What about all the Poles and Ukrainians being exterminated by the Russians? Ever heard of the Holodomor? That is regarded as an act of genocide to the Ukrainians and the Katyn Massacre, the USSR did not admit that until it fell in 1990.

I find it odd how it is the only massacre in mankind that there is no room for debate, examination of the facts or dispute over evidence without fear of jail, violence or ridicule.

I debate the Armenian Genocide on a daily basis; I daren't say a single word or write a single sentence about the Holocaust.

It happened without question; my ancestors were caught up in it. But why the "no platform"? Is it really only to keep the extremists and Hitler worshippers at bay? Many of their claims are ridiculous and could be debated with easily. But evidence works both ways and I am yet to be convinced of the entire episode purely from a historical perspective. Absolute tragedy though without question.

You need more than to visit the place Tyler... you need to read the evidence in full to understand the full horror of the Holocaust.

That said. in any organisation you will have nutcases; because the BNP is a marginal party with a significantly lower membership base than say New Labour the activities of its members are highlighter more often. If I set up a dedicated organisation determined to root out every misdemeanour of New Labour or the Conservatives I could make them look equally as bad as the BNP: any day of the week mate.

But because I am not vindictive and do not have a heightened sense of absurd moral duty I do not follow the line of Searchlight or the UAF. The people behind for supporting these organisations think Britain will succumb to a style of fascist government like Germany in the 1930s.

With regard to the persecution of the Jews by the BNP; as a Jewish fella I do not feel particularly hard done by because of my religion. My rights and freedoms have been eroded by both the Conservatives and New Labour in the past 20 years. The British people have been seduced into a radical idea of multi-culturalism that simply does not exist in any other country in the world. Other countries are multi-racial but you would never see a New York district banning the word Christmas in case it offended her Muslim population. How this occurs in Britain is beyond me?

But hey, lets have a go at the BNP for having a problem with the imagined threat of world Jewry and forget what the British government is doing to her own citizens.

Michael (Steele) when most people mention The Holocaust they are generally referring to all its victims, I know I am. No-one is concentrating solely on the Jewish dead. The fact that the Holocaust, as you rightly mention, claimed over 20,000,000 people (for little else than their ethnic identity, sexuality (dis)abilities or politics) only serves to make the crime of denial all the more disgusting. And the fact that members of the BNP are on record as denying the Holocaust ever took place is particularly worrying. Why do they deny it? What purpose does it serve them and their policies to convince us that the Holocaust did not occur? If the BNP are not the Nazi influenced racists of popular imagination as you claim then why do they strive to cover up the Holocaust despite the overriding evidence to the contrary?

Vaughan, yes most political parties have "nutcases" as members, as does any significantly large grouping of people. Its a statistical inevitability. However the BNP attracts more than its fair share, more than other parties, and to a deeper degree. There are far fewer members of other political parties with conviction for bombmaking, racial assaults, drug dealing, football hooliganism, other violent crimes, threatening behaviour etc. Yes all political parties have members or ex-members who have criminal records etc, but not as many as the BNP, not to the severity of the BNP, and when you regard the comparatively smaller size of the BNP compared to the vast majority of the other parties this number becomes significantly and statistically magnified. Not only that but the very basis of BNP thought and policy itself is vile. Racism, class prejudice (although not so different from the Conservatives in this respect, or even New Labour for that matter, only more so) and overtly and worrying authoritarian stances. There is also much in the politics of the BNP that would attract those with criminal and violent tendencies. Plus there is little to suggest that the BNP policies are well thought out or viable (have you actually considered the logistics of repatriating every non-Northern European in Britain - cost, time, resources, loss of tax revenue, people of mixed race who are as Northern European as they are African/Asian etc and many other such problems.) Many are written solely to attract new members and voters by spreading fear and promising solutions to popular fears - many of which are based on groundless anxiety or have been whipped up by the BNP and its ilk. For instance the BNP claim that we as a nation are exposed to a dangerous threat of Islamic jihadism/terror etc. This is plainly rubbish. There are Islamic fundamentalist terrorists yes, but they only represent a very minimal % of the Muslim population of Britain, and as mentioned above, every population has its nutters. Why should the vast majority of non-fundamentalist Muslims suffer due to the actions of a tiny fraction? (this is before we consider the effects that aggressive US foreign policy had with regards to stirring up/creating Islamic fundamentalism in the first place.) The only purpose it serves is to convince the electorate that there exists a problem to which the BNP and its policies are the only answer. This is called Scapegoating and led, as history shows us, and despite the protestations of people such as the BNP to the Holocaust. Perhaps this is why the BNP deny the Holocaust as it serves as a tangible reminder of why we should not vote for political parties with openly racist policies and an authoritarian stance?

For me personally I also fear a BNP govt. because history has shown that political parties such as the BNP who apply a sheen of respectability over a dangerous past/membership and extremist policies often change their stance once elected. The extreme-right-policies-portrayed-as-reasonable solutions-to-a-problem-they-have-pinpointed can, and I feel would take a decidedly nastier turn upon their election. I admit that this is just my own perception but I do fear that when a party such as the BNP are elected we will become an authoritarian one party state, with concentration camps and the such for dissenters and ethnic minorities, homosexuals etc. There is no real evidence to that I know other than historic precedent and clues issued in unguarded comments by BNP members but I feel that this is a fear that cannot and should not be ignored.

im not basing all my knowledge on the fact that i have been there, i also did a level and gcse history with WW2 and the holocaust being a major part of the course and watching the national history channel has provided me with hours of entertainment and knowledge, i agree with u however what the british government is doing or not doing in recent years is wrong, the names should not be changed to festive songs rather than xmas carols, xmas plays in primary schools should not be changed to accommodate others belief systems and its absolutely absurd that brits can now be accused of being racist just for flying the british flag..

I personally feel that if you want to move to England from other countries you should be able to adopt and accept our culture and our way of life and i would say to any muslim who is unhappy with the way the country is run and that wants sharia law introduced that England is a secular society and it will remain that way and if you don't like the way we live then leave, go to Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iraq, Iran or Dubai and live by sharia law if you honestly believe that you will have a greater quality of life because they will not have the same freedoms there as we enjoy here..

I am not denying the case that within the BNP membership there is a statistical anomaly concerning thuggish, criminal behaviour. But because of the nature of the BNP's political leanings these cases are quite often sensationalised over and above what the courts have found to be accurate. All this week there has been talk from Searchlight and the UAF about the Liverpool 12/13/14 who have been arrested for allegedly distributing racist material. However, they have been very quiet considering the fact they were released without charge.

"have you actually considered the logistics of repatriating every non-Northern European in Britain - cost, time, resources, loss of tax revenue, people of mixed race who are as Northern European as they are African/Asian etc and many other such problems."

I have never agreed fully with any BNP policy and probably never will. But they do have a point on freedom of speech and they do have a point on the enforced idea of multiculturalism within Britain. Is it not odd to suggest that somehow Christmas offends minorities for example?

"For instance the BNP claim that we as a nation are exposed to a dangerous threat of Islamic jihadism/terror etc. This is plainly rubbish. There are Islamic fundamentalist terrorists yes, but they only represent a very minimal % of the Muslim population of Britain, and as mentioned above, every population has its nutters."

Ok... 2,974 people died in the 9/11 attacks not including 19 Muslim terrorists committing the atrocities. If you do the math then you will realise a small number of Islamic fundamentalists can kill an unimagined number of people should they so wish. The 7/7 events killed 52 people and 700 injured conducted by 4 Muslim men. So the risk numerically is very severe concerning the amount of damage that can be caused by a small number of nutcases. The majority of Muslims are bloody hard workers and the stalwarts of British industry and enterprise. But do you cover your pin number up when you pay for things? Will a woman make sure her bag is closed when walking around town? Will you strap your child up in the recommended EU child seat? These are all government directives designed for the majority to adhere to in order to cover a minority of historic events. What the BNP is doing is no different really in my opinion and all political parties do it.

"For me personally I also fear a BNP govt"

Which will never happen. If you look at the history of British politics no far right party has even come close to pricking the bubble of Westminster. The British political system will never allow Britain to become a one party state as there are too many controls in place to make sure it doesn't happen. I know that you are referring to the Nazis when you make these comments and rightly so because of the history of far right parties. But this is the problem; rather than people addressing the actual flaws in extreme right wing ideology people try to stamp out any traces of extremist parties with prejudices based upon historical events. I have three friends who are in the BNP and to call them racist is an insult to me personally because of the amount of work they do voluntarily in a deprived area of Nuneaton that consists of many ethnic minorities.

Not so, the basis remains, the BNP, or at least its leading council are thugs always have been, always will be. Nothing has been sensationalised. It is a plain fact that the BNP attracts, or at least is made up of, criminals and thugs, way more so than any other parties, no amount of press sensationalism can alter that, the facts speak for themselves.

A small amount of nutcases within any community party or section of society can cause a massive amount of damage and loss of life, to suggest that Muslim fundamentalism is in some way different than any other dangerous group is fallacy, since the ability to cause such damage is neither dictated by religion nor race. Any amount of dangerous fundamentalists can cause such damage given access to the tools, resources and opportunities and believing they have sufficient cause. This is why I abhor ALL fundamentalism, Christian, Muslim or whatever.

" But do you cover your pin number up when you pay for things? Will a woman make sure her bag is closed when walking around town? Will you strap your child up in the recommended EU child seat? I hope to God that we never see a BNP Govt. ever. And as far as your friends go they themselves may not be racist, but then it is a historical fact that many people who initially voted for the National Socialists did not consider themselves racist or for one minute thought that voting for Hitler would lead to the gas chambers, they merely wished to express their concerns and the nazi's at the time, exactly like the BNP addressed the ordinary concerns of ordinary Germans, using these concerns to gain power, but they turned their backs on these concerns post election. The same people have said if they had known what would happen they would never have voted for Hitler. This can never be allowed to happen ever again. To me the BNP are displaying the same pattern of development/tactics that the National Socialists did, i.e a group of hardline thugs, who upon realising that puchs etc. would only lead to prison applied themselves to creating a publically accessible image, covering passed mistakes and applying themselves to the concenes of an electorate who thought that no-one else would listen to their concenes all the while creating a bogeyman in the form of the Jews (for Jews read Muslims/Immigrants today) and claiming that they alone had the policies/courage to face these so-called problems. Its a stark warning to me why not to trust the BNP. I do feel sorry for people who genuinly believe that the BNP have changed their ways because they have been fooled by Griffin and co.

"It is a plain fact that the BNP attracts, or at least is made up of, criminals and thug... way more so than any other parties"

This time it is sensationalism from you. I have already stated that New Labour consists of many MPs and Mayors who have child sex offences which is way above what would be considered normal (i.e. none). This does not mean New Labour are a party of paedophiles.

"Not sure what this has to do with alleged Muslim terrorism or the BNP, please explain further."

You argued Islamophobia is used by the BNP to stir up racial hatred. Muslim terrorists, as you have argued, are in the minority. I have said that anything that affects a minority affects the majority. It was an agreement but also an assertion whether it be terrorism, muggings or fraud. We are told to be suspicious of people with hoodies. It's no different to the BNP telling us to be suspicious of Bin Laden lookalikes. As far as I am aware the BNP said all terrorists must be booted out of Britain. Also, as far as I am aware, David Cameron has told us we must hug a hoodie.

"to suggest that Muslim fundamentalism is in some way different than any other dangerous group is fallacy, since the ability to cause such damage is neither dictated by religion nor race."

Who says it is any different? I certainly haven't.

"It is a historical fact that many people who initially voted for the National Socialists did not consider themselves racist or for one minute thought that voting for Hitler would lead to the gas chambers, they merely wished to express their concerns and the nazi's at the time, exactly like the BNP addressed the ordinary concerns of ordinary Germans, using these concerns to gain power, but they turned their backs on these concerns post election."

Hardly the truth... in any case Hitler addressed all of the concerns of the German people post Weimar such as kick-starting industrial production, squashing hyper-inflation, setting up public service schemes that Roosevelt copied in the US. Hitler, before the war, was very much an admired man both in Europe and across the pond. This is not Nazi wish-washy Hitler loving speak... it is what is taught at university in order to understand the nature of the Nazis. It is used to teach the idea that extremism has a place in politics but therein underlies a belly of hate. It was not the German peoples fault, the Nazis simply betrayed their mandate and destroyed the newly formed Weimar democracy.

The lesson that can be learned is that time after time the Nazis were beaten at both the polls and in the courts. They were scorned... picked on... made a laughing stock. That was until they seized upon a number of truths the people of Germany took to heart (personal pride for one, nationalism the other). When the politicians scorned these ideas the people rejected their new form of government and felt like the government were not listening. Hence the increase in support for the Nazis.

So what am I trying to say? Quite simply the degenerates who are mocking the BNP and forcing strange ideas of Nazism upon their members could potentially be mocking the very people feeling their views on a number of issues are being ignored by the mainstream parties. No wonder they are turning to the BNP, especially when the rational debate that IS going on within the government is the one of out of control immigration.

How can it be sensationalism, you your self stated that

"I am not denying the case that within the BNP membership there is a statistical anomaly concerning thuggish, criminal behaviour"

I have never denied that other political parties have their criminals, as do most large groups of people, its a statistical fact, what is true, and not sensationalism, as you yourself stated, there are far more BNP members convicted of such crimes, especially compared to their releatively small size. When we get to violent crime the disparity rises, when we consider both racially motivated violence, and strangley football related violence, the gap grows alarmingly. Its no sensationalism, but statistical proven fact that you yourself agreed to in your previous post.

I don't deny that the actions of a minority can and do affect the majority, however the vast majority should not be held to ransom by a far right party for he actions of a few in order to win votes.

I am no more suspicious of every young person I meet wearing a hood than I am of every man with dark skin and a big beard. To be so is to unfairly accuse people of crimes or attitudes or a way of life solely because a small number of people who look similar to them have committed offenses, wehter thats mugging or suicide bombing

"Hardly the truth"

No, exactly the truth, you should read personal interviews recorded by historians such as Goldhagen, and Lawrence Rees that substabiante my assertion that not all Germans knew exactly what they were letting themselves in for and would they have done they would never have voted for the Nazi's. The nazis' spoke the words that the populace wanted to hear and were voted in as a result. I am not arguing that Hitler failed to address the concerns of the German people with regards to areas such as inflation, however if the German people had known the truth of the matter, where it would have led ie the Holocaust I doubt very much they would have elected Hitler.

I don't doubt for a moment that the poeple's dissatisfaction with the mainstream parties is repsonible for the surge of support for the BNP, Labour have betrayed the working class time and time again since coming to power. What I am saying is that turning to the BNP who are covering their true nature beneath so-called concerns for the ordinary people and support for freedom of speech is bloody dangerous. The BNP have no more concern for the freedom of speech of the people of Britain than Labour do, probably a lot less, unless you agree with what they say when they say it. Were the BNP to achieve power, and, like you I doubt that day will ever occur, but should it, the freedom of speech of every dissenting voice will be lost, and to me that is to high a price to pay for a concernes over a mulitracial society, especially when these fears are exagerated and the trouble that occurs is just as much to do with the attitudes and actions of people like the BNP who refuse to even try through sheer ignorance.
